

Layers and Filters

When you create a convolution layer, you specify a filter size and the number of filters. These filters extract features in an input image. Previously, you viewed these extracted features using the `activations` function. Each of the features was created using a different filter. You have seen the result of these filters, but not what the filters look like or how they are learned.

